WHAT IS CTRF ?

CANCER TREATMENT RELATED FATIGUE

CTRF is a common and distressing side-effect of oncologic treatments, defined as a persistent and overwhelming sense of fatigue, tiredness, weakness, memory and concentration difficulties, reduced physical and mental stamina, increased irritability, and decreased ability to perform usual activities. These symptoms can have a significant impact on a patient's emotional and mental well-being, social interactions, and ability to work or participate in daily life.

CTRF impacts over 70% of all active cancer patients, with some suffering from it for long periods after their recovery.

COMPLICATIONS OF CANCER FATIGUE

- Persistent fatigue can interfere with your ability to participate in life's activities.
- You may miss out on time with family and friends.
- It can affect your ability to concentrate and think clearly.
- Some people are too exhausted to continue working.
- As many as 1 in 4 people with cancer develop depression. Sometimes, it's hard to determine if fatigue leads to depression or vice versa.

ENCER BASED ON CLINICAL RESEARCH

- Encer is a newly-found homeopathic medicine to battle Cancer Treatment Related Fatigue (CTRF).
- Encer's mission is to allow significant relief, gain back stamina and elevate energy levels while integrating seamlessly with conventional oncological treatments.
